Social Media and Workers' Comp:
3 Examples That Show Why Sharing Might Not Be Best

If you suffer a severe workplace injury, it is only natural to want to update your friends and family. You're hurt! You want to let them know what happened, or maybe you want to vent a little to those you trust. And if you let them know on Facebook, Instagram, or TikTok, is that really such a big deal?

Do You Need a Lawyer for Your Workers' Comp Claim?
5 Fast Reasons to Consider Representation

If you are injured on the job in Georgia, the Workers' Compensation system is supposed to act as a safety net. You report the injury, the insurance company pays for your medical treatment, and you receive a portion of your lost wages while you heal.

Unfortunately, the reality is far more adversarial.

This was my first time ever having a work injury, and I actually had 2 separate injuries, a week apart from each other, one injury for each arm. I ended up needing surgery for both injuries, and I didn't know the first thing about getting anything handled. Brian was there every step of the way and assisted with getting the approvals for my surgeries, as well as all the therapy needed for recovery. Having 2 injuries, both needing surgery, I was not able to work for quite some time, and Brian helped get a settlement for me that helped make up for that lost time. If you or anyone you know is in need of services for a workers' compensation claim, I highly recommend Brian Sumrall to help you along the way!
